

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods according to the present invention describe image processing techniques for processing images wherein a displayed image is potentially occluded. The occluding object can then itself be displayed on the video device. Passive and active testing techniques resolve ambiguity between the occluding object and the displayed image.